A bit more about the Gypsey Race

A few months back I wrote a short article about the chalk stream that is known as the Gypsey Race. Shortly after the article was published Rod from Butterwick was in touch to say that on its path through Weaverthorpe and Butterwick, the stream is known as the Lord's River.

I've tried to find out why it has this change of name but to no avail. To complicate research I've turned up five Butterwicks all with rivers or streams. Even more strange the Butterwick in County Durham, like the village in Yorkshire has a Lord's River!

The County Durham river took its name from the lord of the manor of Butterwick in the 16th century. I suspect the local Lord's River has a similar reason for its name. Do you know differently?

Firestoppers tell us what you know, 100% anonymously

Have you any information about deliberate fires in your area? Details of locations and names of those intent on anti-social behaviour can help the fire service, police and local authority target criminality in your community.

Even small outdoor fires can be dangerous, because they place additional stress on our limited resources – dealing with a nuisance fire affects our ability to respond to more serious incidents like house fires or road traffic accidents.

If you have information regarding an incident of deliberate fire, you can tell us what you know, 100% anonymously. We are interested in what you know, not your identity.

Humberside Fire and Rescue,

No Thwing Coffee Morning in May

Due to the May coffee morning falling on the same date as the Coronation, it was moved forward to April 29th.

As this was a late decision, it was not possible to get the date change into the April newsletter.

It's back to normal in June with a coffee morning on Saturday June 3rd.

Arts & Crafts Traders Needed

We are getting the market side of things booked up for the Thwing & Octon fun show and fete and I wondered if you, or anyone you know, would like a trader's pitch in the Marmaduke's Market tent? If needed, a six-foot table can be supplied but these are in short supply so if you don't have your own table, you would need to request one as soon as possible.

As always, the show will be held on August bank holiday Sunday which this time falls on Sunday 27th Aug. The fee remains the same as previous years at £10 for the day.

Please let me know if you would like to take part. You can email thwing.group@outlook.com or call 07969 387107

Why the name Marmaduke's Market?

During the reign of Henry III, Marmaduke de Thweng (Thwing) gained right from the crown to run a market and fair in Thwing. The first of these markets was held in Thwing circa 1257. We have revived that market, as part of the Thwing & Octon Fun Show and Fete, albeit in a small way, while giving a nod to history and Marmaduke de Thweng.

Using Artificial Intelligence (AI)

As an experiment I will try using Artificial Intelligence (AI) to write some short articles for the newsletter which will be labelled as "Created by AI", Up until now I've written all but four of the newsletter articles and in the absence of anyone willing to help with writing, I will be resorting to technology and AI.

Ship Inn, Langtoft Closes Down but then Re-Opens

In April, the Ship Inn at Langtoft announced it was closing it's doors for good. However, during the course of the next few days, it was decided to reverse that decision and keep the pub going.

Most people want to see the Ship survive and thrive, but for this to happen it must be supported and that means using it.

Military Structures in Thwing

Earlier this year I was asked if I could track down information about a military building that may have been on or near Church Lane in Thwing. I was told it could be related to World War II or possibly WW1 and nothing more.

I set to work getting in touch with various historical groups and contacts and began research on the Internet, all of which proved fruitless. Next, I visited the Treasure House in Beverley where I spoke to an archivist. The very helpful Treasure House team searched the archives for me but none of this took me any further. I still had zero information about any possible military structure. At this point I was ready to give up the search.

Then I unexpectedly received an email from the former Military Support Officer of English Heritage/Historic England who had been informed of my investigation. He told me of a brick structure on Rectory Farm land, Thwing, which he said was listed as a searchlight emplacement. He went on to say, after looking at photographs, he thought the listing was wrong. He didn't think it was a searchlight because the walls were too high and they would obstruct the light. He thought instead that it was "more likely to be a blast wall that protected a timber high-frequency/direction finding (HF/DF) tower". This was quite exciting.

HF/DF towers were used by the RAF to track both enemy and friendly aircraft. They were also used by the Admiralty and GCHQ to monitor radio chatter and track U-boats.

I was sent photos and diagrams of HF/DF towers and blast walls so my next step was to show them to local residents to see if they rang any bells. The first person I showed them to was Mike Burdass and what he told me was pure gold.

He thought the structure was a searchlight emplacement as he remembered seeing a searchlight beam emanating from the area. He also went on to tell me of an anti-aircraft gun that would have been visible from Church Lane. In the company of searchlights it was not uncommon to find one, two or even three anti-aircraft light machine guns (AALMG).

The photo above, is from the Roger J C Thomas Collection and was taken by Mr D Holmes at Folkestone, in 1940. It shows a Lewis Light machine-gun. The Lewis was the most commonly used AALMG and it is likely that it was a Lewis in the field to the side of Church Lane. However, Bren, Vickers K, and Browning guns were also used.

I relayed Mike's information to my English Heritage contact. He still thinks, even with the searchlight evidence, that the brick construction was more likely to be an HF/DF tower and went on to say it was not uncommon for a searchlight to be located by the towers. He also said the only way to be sure would be for him to see the floor of the construction which would have features allowing him to identify its use.

Do you remember seeing a wooden tower, which would have been visible from the Wold Newton road, and possibly from Church Lane? Do you have any further information about military activity and buildings in Thwing? If so please get in touch.

Mike continued to tell me stories of wartime Thwing such as the Church Reading Room being used by the Home Guard and an incendiary bomb that came through the church roof leaving scorch marks behind that are still visible today.
